boise

a rare blend

BOISE IS... A city nestled along the river where the desert softly meets the Rocky Mountains... A city major corporations choose to call home because they find urban amenities without urban hassles...A city touched by four seasons but always with moderation... A city where your daytime golf game could be the warm up for your nighttime of skiing...A city given birth by hardworking, visionary pioneers and treasured by those who sustain her life today. Idaho's capital is a small city with a big heart and a hometown feeling.

BOISE IS... a nice place to be. After more than a century, the hard work and stubborn faith of early pioneers have been amply rewarded as Boise has grown into a place where business, culture, education, art and recreation thrive in a comfortable partnership. Those early settlers had the vision to see that the plentiful waters of the Boise River would be the pulse of the community. Those waters helped to turn the desert into a lush oasis where trees now line the boulevards and lend a sense of grace to the developing lifestyle. Today the river remains the place from which this community draws its life. The river banks have been developed into a unique Greenbelt where people of all ages find a quiet place to stroll, jog, walk, skate or bike. A network of city parks grace the river's edge. Residences, corporations, hotels and restaurants have sprung up within view of the pristine river, so much a part of the Boise lifestyle. To be counted among the city's great assets are Julia Davis Park, with the Boise Art Museum, Idaho Black History Museum, Discovery Center, Idaho Historical Museum, Zoo Boise and, across the street, the Idaho Anne Frank Human Rights Memorial; Ann Morrison Park where soccer fields, softball fields, playgrounds and picnic areas draw constant activity; and Kathryn Albertson Park where one can stroll around ponds with gushing fountains, island gazebos, a wetlands area and thousands of trees and plants.
